

6 SIMPLE MINDFUL EXERCISES

MINDFULNESS HANDOUT 4

Mindfulness Starts Here....

one: Mindful breathing exercise

This exercise can be done standing up or sitting down, and almost anywhere at any time. All you have to do is be still and focus on your breath for just one minute.

Start by breathing in and out slowly. One cycle should last for approximately 6 seconds. Breathe in through your nose and out through your mouth, letting your breath flow effortlessly in and out of your body.

Let go of your thoughts for a minute. Let go of things you have to do later today or pending projects that need your attention. Simply let yourself be still for one minute.

Purposefully watch your breath, focusing your senses on its pathway as it enters your body and fills you with life, and then watch it work its way up and out of your mouth as its energy dissipates into the world.

If you are someone who thought they'd never be able to meditate, guess what? You are half way there already! If you enjoyed one minute of this mindcalming exercise, why not try two or three?

TIME OUT - SELF CARE

"Mindfulness is a way of befriending ourselves & our experience"

Two: Mindful Observation

This exercise is simple but incredibly powerful. It is designed to connect us with the beauty of the natural environment, something that is easily missed when we are rushing around in the car or hopping on and off trains on the way to work.

Choose a natural object from within your immediate environment and focus on watching it for a minute or two. This could be a flower or an insect, or even the clouds or the moon.

Don't do anything except notice the thing you are looking at. Simply relax into a place of inner peace for as long as your concentration allows. Look at it as if you are seeing it for the first time. Visually explore every aspect of its formation. Allow yourself to be consumed by its presence. Allow yourself to connect with its energy and its role and purpose in the natural world.

Three: Be Mindful Aware

This exercise is designed to cultivate a heightened awareness and appreciation of simple daily tasks and the results they achieve.

Think of something that happens every day more than once; something you take for granted, like opening a door, for example. At the very moment, you touch the doorknob to open the door, stop for a moment and be mindful of where you are, how you feel at that moment and where the door will lead you. Similarly, the moment you open your computer to start work, take a moment to appreciate the hands that enable this process and the brain that facilitates your understanding of how to use the computer.

These touch point cues don't have to be physical ones. For example, each time you think a negative thought you might choose to take a moment to stop, label the thought as unhelpful and release the negativity. Or, perhaps each time you smell food, you take a moment to stop and appreciate how lucky you are to have good food to eat and share with your family and friends.

Choose a touch point that resonates with you today. Instead of going through your daily motions on autopilot, take occasional moments to stop and cultivate purposeful awareness of what you are doing and the blessings it brings your life.

"Be happy in the moment, that's enough. Each moment is all we need, not more"

Four: This exercise is designed to open your ears to sound in a non-judgmental way.

Our past experiences influence so much of what we see and hear on a daily basis, but when we listen mindfully, we achieve a neutral, present awareness that lets us hear sound without preconception.

Select a piece of music you have never heard before. You may have something in your own collection that you have never listened to, or you might choose to turn the radio dial until something catches your ear.

Close your eyes and put on your headphones. Try not to get drawn into judging the music by its genre, title or artist name before it has begun playing. Instead, ignore any labels and neutrally allow yourself to get lost in the journey of sound for the duration of the song.

Allow yourself to explore every aspect of track. Even if the music isn't to your liking at first, let go of your dislike and give your awareness full permission to climb inside the track and dance among the sound waves. The idea is just to listen, to become thoroughly entwined with the composition without preconception or judgment of the genre, artist, lyrics or instrumentation.

Five: Mindful Immersion Exercise

The intention of this exercise is to cultivate contentment in the moment and escape the persistent striving we find ourselves caught up in on a daily basis. Rather than anxiously wanting to finish an everyday routine task to get on with doing something else, take that routine and fully experience it like never before.

For example: if you are cleaning your house, pay attention to every detail of the activity. Rather than treat this as a regular chore, create an entirely new experience by noticing every aspect of your actions: Feel and become the motion when sweeping the floor, sense the muscles you use when scrubbing the dishes, develop a more efficient way of wiping the windows clean.

The idea is to get creative and discover new experiences within an everyday routine task. Instead of labouring through and constantly thinking about finishing the task, become aware of every step and fully immerse yourself in the process.

Take the activity beyond a routine by aligning yourself with it physically, mentally and spiritually. Who knows, you might even enjoy the cleaning for once! When carrying out routine jobs like this this, most people become more focussed on what they want to do next, rather on focussing on the task in hand and completing it with excellence.

For many people, this can be one of the most powerful exercises to demonstrate how rewarding mindfulness practice can be.

Six: Mindful Appreciation exercise

In this last exercise, all you have to do is notice five things in your day that usually go unappreciated. These things can be objects or people – it's up to you.

Use a notepad to check off five things in your day by the end of the day today.

The point of this exercise is to become more appreciative of the seemingly insignificant things in life; the things that support our existence but rarely get a second thought amidst our desire for bigger and better things.

We can do this in the midst of our day-to-day lives by paying more attention to our devices, or our materialistic possessions and even in the busyness of our workplace./ school - Consider what the honest answers are to the following questions:

Do you know how these things/ processes came to exist, or how they work?

Have you ever properly acknowledged how these things benefit your life and the lives of others?

Have you ever thought about what life might be like without these things?

Have you ever stopped to notice their finer, more intricate details?

Have you ever sat down and thought about the relationships between these things and how together they play an interconnected role in the functioning of the earth?

Once you have identified your five things, make it your duty to find out everything you can about their creation and purpose to actually appreciate the way in which they support your life.

